To help the local economy, independent producers deliver commodities, contributing to the overall production of output. For this to be effective, the independent producers must be divided independent of the production process and the production process must be divided into independent units. These units are independent of each other and independent of each other in terms of their production processes and the production process must be independent of each other to provide a meaningful base of independent producers.

The local economy is divided into independent units that are independent of each other and independent of each other in terms of their production processes and the production process must be independent of each other to provide a meaningful base of independent producers. These units are independent of each other and independent of each other in terms of their production processes and the production process must be independent of each other to provide a meaningful base of independent producers.